“Teen Childbearing in Texas Cost Tax Payers $1.2 Billion Annually “

The National Campaign to Prevent Teen & Unplanned Pregnancy;
June 9, 2011

Teen childbearing in Texas cost taxpayers at least $1.2 billion in 2008, according to an updated analysis from the National Campaign to Prevent Teen and Unplanned Pregnancy. Of these costs, 57% were federal costs and 43% were state and local costs. For the national overall, teen childbearing costs taxpayers $10.9 billion.

Most of the public sector costs of teen childbearing are associated with negative consequences for the children of teen mothers, during both their childhood and their young adult years. Annual taxpayer costs associated with children born to teen mothers include public health care, child welfare, and, among those children who have reached adolescence and young adulthood, increased rates of incarceration, and lost tax revenue due to decreased earnings and spending.

Between 1991 and 2008 there have been 961,460 teen births in Texas, costing taxpayers a total of $22.1 billion. These public sector costs would have been higher had it not been for the substantial declines in teen childbearing over that same period. Texas has seen a 20% decline in the teen birth rate between 1991 and 2008. The impressive strides made in reducing teen childbearing in Texas saved taxpayers an estimated $408 million in 2008 alone, compared to what they would have paid if rates had not fallen.

“Reducing teen pregnancy not only improves the well-being of children, youth, and families, it saved taxpayer dollars,” said Sarah Brown, CEO of The National Campaign to Prevent Teen and Unplanned Pregnancy. “At a time when policymakers and others are intensely focused on cost-saving measures, funding proven efforts to reduce teen pregnancy is important, timely, and should be a high priority.”
